VOLUME XLVII.

A TRIPLE DROWNING TRAGEDY

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young of Auburn, formerly of Norway, and Minnie Chamberlain of Lakeport, N. H., perish in the waters of Lake Penesseewassee, Wednesday afternoon.

The saddest drowning accident ever occurring in the waters of Lake Penesseewassee took place Wednesday afternoon in a triple drowning tragedy off Gibson's Grove, when Frank Young and wife, Fannie Boynton Young, of Auburn and Minnie Chamberlain of Lakeport, N. H., were drowned while in wading and bathing on the sand bar near the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith and 6 year old daughter, all living in Auburn, and Minnie Chamberlain of Lakeport, N. H., sister of Mrs. Smith's cottage, Mr. and Mrs. Young, Miss Chamberlain, and the little Smith girl had gone over to the grove in a motor boat to enjoy the sandy beach for a bath.

The inviting and apparently ideal spot for bathing had also drawn others, and George Sullivan with his son Henry, and Charles and Ruth Cummings were also in bathing at the same place. After having been in the water for some time Mr. Sullivan noticed that his son Henry was shivering with the cold and went back into the grove to get the boy's clothes.

While gone, he heard shouts and cries from the women and running back to the shore saw the struggling people in the water. The older people had been teaching the little Smith girl to swim and all unconscious of any treachery in the apparently delightful lake bottom, had walked out over a straight drop into deep water. The women could not swim and had pulled Mr. Young under with them.

Mr. Young was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Young of Auburn. He attended the schools at Auburn and Edward Little high school. By trade he was a machinist, having worked here at the shoe factory a few years. He was employed at the time of his death by the United Shoe Machinery Co.

The funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Young will be held Friday at the Congregational church of which Mrs. Young is a member. Her pastor, Rev. Charles Penney, who united them in marriage Jan. 5, 1915 will officiate.

Reunion of Class of 1890. The class of 1890, N. H. S., held their 26th reunion, Saturday afternoon and evening at H. D. Smith's cottage, the Green Dragon on Fore street.

A supper was enjoyed consisting of sandwiches and salads, lemon and custard pies, doughnuts and coffee, cake and ice cream, salted peanuts and confectionery. Officers elected were:

Pres.—Freeland Howe.
Sec. and Treas.—G. A. Tucker.
Executive Com.—G. A. Tucker, Cook, Lee M. Smith and Lillian (Stearns) Locke.

Out of the twenty-four who graduated five have died. The deceased of Arthur Swan in January, being the last and making one death since the last reunion. There were ten of the class present and with husbands and wives, the party numbered fifteen. Those present were:

Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Fredland Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGinnis of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Cushman, Russ Jackson, Geneva (Cross) Cook, Lillian (Stearns) Locke, Carrie Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hutchins of Rochester, N. H.

The class voted to make the reunion an annual affair and are invited to meet with them in 1917.

The class of 1890 was the one to start the old alumni association and raise the funds which remained on deposit and were taken up and entered on the books of the newly organized association.

The method of the class organization is a good model for others to follow. The secretary keeps a complete record of the class as follows. The class parts are incorporated in the front part of a book. Then follows a record of every reunion and statistics of marriages, occupations, residences, deaths, etc.

In the back part of the book letters of those unable to attend reunions are kept on file, thus giving a complete and interesting history of this class.

Class of 1908, N. H. S. On the eighth anniversary of the graduation of the class of 1908, the eight members of the class who are now in town, held a reunion at the home of Maud Ellen Pike. Eight seemed to be the lucky number for the class this year, and it was found that this number, 8, extended even to the class statistics for eight of the sixteen members have married and eight children have been born.

A most happy evening was passed with guessing contests, reminiscences and music. Refreshments of cake, ice cream and fancy crackers were served.

As several of the distant members expect to come home next summer, a full reunion is hoped for. Plans for this year were discussed during the evening. Harry L. Downing of Portland was appointed graduate president and Maford Mann of Norway, graduate secretary.

Those present were Maud E. Pike, Harry L. Downing, Maford Mann, Knox Bickford, Maud Mixer, Florence Rideout, Mrs. Janette Russell Pratt, and Mrs. Pearl Harriman Cadigan.

This Thursday evening the Benefit Concert and Ball for the benefit of Co. D, will be held at the Opera House. The usual expenses of a hall have been donated and the active receipts available toward the benefit of the members of the company and their families. The music is under the direction of Frank Kimball and an orchestra of sixteen pieces have offered their services. Ice cream and cake will be served at intermission.

The petitions in regard to the post-office location are at Stuart W. Goodwin's office and at the Noyes Drug Store with Lester Ashton for any to sign who care to.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hill and Irene Emery visited at H. G. Dinmore's, Sunday.

Chas. G. Blake is undertaking a new plan of building houses which is somewhat after the plan of the building and loan association. He is planning to build a young man desirous of owning a home and who has not the means to pay the full amount will put in a certain percentage and pay so much each month until all paid for. The cost of the house is completely furnished before hand and the definite number of months and amount ascertained before work is commenced.

Tuesday morning while digging in the ditch in front of Fredland Howe's music store, the water main was accidentally broken, sending a stream of water well up over the roof of the building.

Danger Signal Needed.

Now that we have witnessed the first sad drowning accident caused by bathing in Lake Penesseewassee proper this year, some should be a signal of some sort placed at the sand bar at Gibson's Grove to warn people of the sudden drop at the end of the sand bar which goes suddenly into 25 feet of water.

Visitors who come from away and who are not familiar with this situation are liable to be trapped and something substantial should be placed there at once before another accident occurs.

Trip Around the Mountains. An automobile party comprised of Mrs. Jennie Richardson, Mrs. Elizabeth Sampson, Mrs. Alta Sheen of Norway, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Callahan and Mrs. Leona S. Keen of Dorchester, Mass., enjoyed a most delightful trip around the White Mountains the past week.

The start was made at 6.30 a. m. and the route chosen took them through Bridgton, Fryeburg, Conway Center, North Conway, Intervale, Glen, Bartlett, Bemis, through Crawford Notch and Bretton Woods. The Twin Mountain House was visited, and the trip resumed to Franconia Notch, and a call at the Profile House. A trip was made to the Flume, a special point of interest, which was reached over a narrow board walk three quarters of a mile long, through a solid rock. A picnic dinner was served in one of the delightful spots, and the return trip commenced. This took the party to Echo Lake where pictures of the scenery were taken. Again stopping at the Profile House, the members of the party posed for their pictures, the camera being operated by Mr. Callahan.

A long ride brought them to Randolph when it was supper time, and the baskets were opened, and every one found they were hungry, but there were miles ahead and a start was again made, the places on the way being Jefferson, Gorham, Shelburne, Gilead, West Bethel, Albany, North Waterford, and Waterford Flat. At the latter place it was decided to wait and make the remainder of the trip by moonlight, and Norway was reached at 1.15 a. m. Friday morning.

The trip was made in a fine eight cylinder Oakland owned by the Norway Auto Company, and was driven by F. Wilson Walker, and all the party are enthusiastic over the trip of about 210 miles.

O. R. Carey of Worcester, Mass. and C. R. Carey, manager of Nelson's 5 and 10 cent store, were in town, Sunday, with their families are tenting for a few days back of the schoolhouse at Frost Corner. They came through with their auto and are much pleased with Norway and the lake.

Mrs. Mary Gammon, 14 Beal St., Norway, says: "I have kept Doan's Kidney Pills on hand for years, in fact, ever since I first took them nearly ten years ago. The symptoms I noticed indicated kidney complaint. There was a dull, heavy ache across the small of my back and often attacks of dizziness came over me. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I got from Frank Kimball's Drug Store, proved very fine in relieving me of these troubles. I take them off and on now as a kidney tonic and couldn't wish for anything better to keep my kidneys in good condition."

What Causes Colds? Some of the Usual Reasons Cold in the head, cold in the chest, cold in the throat, or cold that settles in your back is all one and the same thing. Cold is congestion, often resulting from lowered vitality. Drafts, getting chilled, and being exposed to the weather will not give you a cold if your organs are active and healthy. But when your stomach is clogged with food, your liver sluggish, the bowels obstructed, or the circulation poor, then you take cold easily because the system is congested. To be free from colds, keep the stomach, liver, bowels, and blood in good order with "L. F." Atwood's Medicine, an old family remedy that wards off colds when taken promptly, and protects against such attacks when used faithfully and regularly.

THE PATH THROUGH THE WOODLAND.

The path is stretching before us. The trail that our fathers trod, Leading us through the best and humblest, Made by the right hand of God. It is a never ending path Leading through the woodland deep. But insects and birds songs, sweet, Leading through the shadows. And where lakes and rivers lie, Reflecting back the forest trees And the brightness of the sky. With the leaf-flecked sunlight dancing And playing over the ground, Giving love and understanding. As the world keeps going round. Throughout the day the leaves rustle And with the breeze the pine sighs; Yet looking above through the green, One can see the big blue sky, With white clouds floating lazily. Like white sails upon the sea; The secret, like fairy's cradles Ever sailing, light and free. Not only in the warm summer Does the path of God lead on, But also in the cold and fall. When Jack Frost has come and gone, And has left upon all the leaves His bright colors, manifold. And stretching as far as eye can see Are the bright colors of God. Then again in the cold winter When all is covered with snow, The mystic path leads on. In silence where ever you go; There's a charm in snowy trees, A charm that the winter we call For God's right hand of Nature Has carefully made it all. Albert P. Pingree.

THE OLD PENNESSEWASSEE

I stood and watched the setting sun As it sank in the golden west, And watched the leaves where in they come And scenes we love the best. There at the head of our busy street, Work was done, and the Pennessewassee, dear old hulk, Lies basking in the sun. Its smiling days are over; And there in twilight dim My thoughts went back to days of yore, When I was a child in my father's home. I told them for their sake. On that same spot I sat when first I sailed up Norway Lake. The good Captain now is dead and gone, We shall see him never more, As he used to guide us through the storm When wild waves lashed the shore. I remember well his kindly face As he stood there, bowing, And grasped the wheel with clenched fists, I seem to see him now. We were half as good on the earth To steer us through the storm of life As he steered the Pennessewassee. Copyright 1916. Frederick M. Davis.

About 50 hands are employed at present at the tannery.

B. H. Brown and others of the 17th Maine Regt. went to Long Island Thursday.

Chas. B. Cummings says he is writing a book entitled "How to Keep Your Clothes Clean." He expects a large sale for the work.

Tuesday the annual meeting of the Oxford County Horse Breeders Association took place. There was a big field of trotters and a small attendance.

The last race and the hit of the day was the running race between H. H. Hosmer's gray mare and T. T. Fuller's Dandy Dick. Bertie Hosmer rode the Gray and it was a caution the way the little fellow rode and won the first heat while the people went wild. Dandy Dick however, won the next two heats and the race.

South Paris, Saturday, Chas. Rayson left one of John Cummings' teams in front of the Postoffice with a lead horse hitched to the seat. The result was a very natural one. Both horses were caught after a time. The wagon was somewhat damaged.

Seth Farrar had a runaway while near the depot Saturday. The wagon was considerably damaged when the horse plunged over the embankment. Fortunately Mr. Parlin escaped with slight injury.

Hal Gerry won 1st money in the boys' bicycle race Tuesday.

Twenty-four Years Ago This Week Hon. Wm. P. Frye and Hon. A. R. Savage addressed the people of Norway and vicinity on the Republican issues of the campaign at the Norway Opera House.

Mrs. Jonas W. Swan was thrown from a carriage Monday and somewhat injured.

Elmas Wetherbee has commenced laying the foundation for his dwelling house on Crescent St., Joe Long and A. E. Durgin are doing the job.

J. E. McIntire and sons have bought and sold over 2000 lambs since June 10th. They have now some over 1000 lambs bought in Canada and Arrostook which have not been shipped yet.

The Carnival

Friday evening was a night set apart for the annual illumination and decorated boat procession on the Lake. The cottages and homes of those living near the lake made a big display. The attractions were numerous and varied.

The boat procession was the largest and best ever witnessed on these waters. The Norway Cadet Band furnished the music and the two steamers towed the procession.

The designs of boat display were gorgeous, including many from log cabins to full rigged ships.

Capt. F. R. Taylor of New York City had charge of the red lights and fireworks, which were liberally burnt.

The boat procession made the tour of the lake and was saluted with fireworks and cannons.

To be sure the rain moistened the Chinese lanterns some, as well as the enthusiasm of the spectators, yet it was only temporary. Several thousand people were present.

South Paris: Madge Wilson gave a reception Saturday evening in honor of several young ladies of Colby University who were her guests for the day. After the evening's entertainment the return of their cottage at Norway Lake.

Aug. 23rd is as follows: 1st Louie P. Swett; 2nd Hal Gerry; 3rd Len Sessions; 4th O. H. Marston; 5th Sanger Maxim. Time 36 min. 5 seconds. The course led from Market square up high street and west to West Avenue to Main Street, Norway, thence up Main Street, turning to the left at the Advertiser Office and following the Harrison stage road to a certain point, then back by the same route and finishing with 2 miles around the track at the fair grounds.

Japan Fifth in Population.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The statistical bureau of Japan has just announced the population of the empire at the end of 1913, the figures for Japan proper being 53,559,925, and 55,189,923 additional for Chosen (Korea), 3,265,149 for Formosa and 1,691 for Saghalien. This makes the entire population of Japan 71,793,078.

On the rough estimate of the world's population at 1,440,000,000, Japan has a little over 4.9 per cent. In population, Japan proper ranks fifth among the great countries of the world, China coming first, Russia, the United States of America and Germany next in order.

The increase is very rapid, the average in the five years previous to 1913 being 1.5 per cent a year. This is a more rapid increase than in any of the European powers. The density of population is great, coming next to Belgium, the Netherlands and England. The population in Japan is 2,344 per square mile as to the proportion of sexes Japanese population is quite distinct from European countries. There are 102.14 males for every 100 females. Quite recently there has been a tendency for the male population to increase more rapidly than that of the females, due to the greater death rate of young females.

The proportion of the married and unmarried is 94 per cent against 66 percent, and the percentage of the latter is growing. This is because of poverty and late marriages.

Rambling Vacation Notes of Doubtful Public Interest. Printed to Amuse the Writer.

Meredith Center, N. H., Aug. 1916

I left Norway Tuesday, August 8th. Walter Cameron Smith, 'car-driver,' a son of H. D. Smith, known as 'Dan,' to distinguish him from 'H. D.' the banker. Walter is a grandson of Chas. I. Fogg, State Veterinary and Cattle Doctor.

His angle adorns the approaches to his home and can be seen at the right after passing Steep Falls bridge. Chas. Fogg raises early peas and gets them from his garden Fourth of July anyhow.

There was no exception, wet or dry he has them, much to the envy of his neighbors whose peas get onto the table a week later.

Walter is learning to drive a Hudson Six Forty. He is expert in getting power out of gasoline on water running craft.

A fair average would be 8 and it can easily be seen that 800 passengers were going and coming from the mountain resorts which before the day of gasoline propelled road wagons patronized the railroad.

No wonder there is a shrinkage in railroad receipts and a drop in the value of their stock and a clamor for increased freight and passenger fare.

Why not?

While here Dick held up a car and it contained Judge O. A. Towne and daughter of the Franklin Transcript Journal and five others. They left their cottage on the shores of the great Winnepesaukee in the morning and visited the Lost River District and were returning home.

They had several hours there and the judge told me he drove all the way and up to the Log Cabin without changing gears.

His car is a Studebaker. He was to have all of August for a vacation and intended visiting Norway and looking the town over as well as our printing office.

He recently got word however, that he had been awarded the printing of the ballots for the state and this will cut short his vacation. He shouldn't have bid on this work if he wanted a vacation. It serves him right. Glad he got it.

Grandma is painting. Spoiling the white surface of card board with water colored daubs representing rivers, mountains, trees and landscape views. She is much interested in it and is continually touching them up to make them look different and better. Her studio is in the barn with a big door open looking out on a shade covered lawn on which the squirrels play and take refuge from the bad dog "Jack" by climbing a chestnut tree.

Many chatter and call the dog all sorts of bad names and he is as much interested in them as the Mrs. is in painting. All three are apparently happy and doing their duty as they see it. There is no place in our house on which to hang your pictures there are so many pictures. I suggest she sell this crop of paintings for 98 cents each. The Mrs. will not see this until after it is printed and as I'm not fully recovered from last Spring's surgical operation, she will let me off easy.

Blunery picking in years past has kept us all busy but this year they are scattering and hard to find. I did gather in a quart the other day and received unstinted praise from the women folk when I brought them in. I was a hero and as I didn't have a cane and had to squat down and get up a dozen times or so while picking them, I did feel the next day like a barn-cripple who needed a cane and crutch to get about. I've picked no more berries since.

New Hampshire, has some good roads and a constant eye on the pocket-book of the summer tourists. They swap air and scenery for dollars.

A three months' (July, August and September) non-resident license for a Hudson 6-40 costs the same as it does in Maine for a year—$10.00. Ours is number 43 which means that number of non-resident licenses have been issued to Maine people. The houses on New York and on Massachusetts cars run into the thousands, judging from license plates seen on cars.

This brings to mind a remark made by Bank Commissioner F. E. Timberlake, some years ago, when he had moved to take to Massachusetts he said he should not go through New Hampshire but would go by boat. Evidently he feared robbery. This remark was made in the settlement of the Littleton Light & Power Company's affairs wherein Maine Savings Bank were interested bond holders.

That was one of Dan Remick's bold-faced holdups which apparently received the full sanction of the first families of that thriving North County metropolis.

New Hampshire is my native state and its soil covers the ashes of my ancestors and it is with regret that I pen these lines, but the truth must be told. Maine has something similar in its bogus land tax rules to the unsophisticated New Yorker who has been trying for years to recover his money. Somehow I feel this has been paid.

If not, it should be as a State, no more than an individual can afford to gain by dishonesty. That is simply what it was, nothing more or less.

Patriotic families display flags. I have put out two but they are so small and hidden by the trees I am afraid they cannot be seen by the passing autoists. This must be remedied.

The girls and some of the young folks play croquet and it is surprising to see how much gabble there is in a game.

The boys come round and respectfully inquire of my ground and then slip into the hammock with the girls and it's giggle, giggle, giggle for hours.

Mosquitos sing, bees buzz, the dog barks and the tramp keeps on the other side of the street while I wait the slow progress of gaining health and strength.

F. W. Sanborn.

Dick wears overalls and a jumper and his feet were not enclosed in long-legged cow-hides when I was there but no doubt he puts them on when he and Mrs. McLain attend the Grange Meetings. He has a nice young orchard coming into bearing and a good lot of marketable pine trees and plenty of blackberries. He should be contented and happy and we think he is but no doubt he has an occasional "call to the road feeling" which casts a temporary shadow over him.

Their home is on the Central N. H. boulevard, known as the Green and White Trail and the buzz of autos is continuous. Once I stopped here an hour and in that time there were more than 60 cars passed the house, carrying from 2 to 10 passengers. A fair average would be 8 and it can easily be seen that 800 passengers were going and coming from the mountain resorts which before the day of gasoline propelled road wagons patronized the railroad.

No wonder there is a shrinkage in railroad receipts and a drop in the value of their stock and a clamor for increased freight and passenger fare.

She is much interested in it and is continually touching them up to make them look different and better. Her studio is in the barn with a big door open looking out on a shade covered lawn on which the squirrels play and take refuge from the bad dog "Jack" by climbing a chestnut tree.

Many chatter and call the dog all sorts of bad names and he is as much interested in them as the Mrs. is in painting. All three are apparently happy and doing their duty as they see it. There is no place in our house on which to hang your pictures there are so many pictures. I suggest she sell this crop of paintings for 98 cents each. The Mrs. will not see this until after it is printed and as I'm not fully recovered from last Spring's surgical operation, she will let me off easy.

Blunery picking in years past has kept us all busy but this year they are scattering and hard to find. I did gather in a quart the other day and received unstinted praise from the women folk when I brought them in. I was a hero and as I didn't have a cane and had to squat down and get up a dozen times or so while picking them, I did feel the next day like a barn-cripple who needed a cane and crutch to get about. I've picked no more berries since.

New Hampshire, has some good roads and a constant eye on the pocket-book of the summer tourists. They swap air and scenery for dollars.

A three months' (July, August and September) non-resident license for a Hudson 6-40 costs the same as it does in Maine for a year—$10.00. Ours is number 43 which means that number of non-resident licenses have been issued to Maine people. The houses on New York and on Massachusetts cars run into the thousands, judging from license plates seen on cars.

This brings to mind a remark made by Bank Commissioner F. E. Timberlake, some years ago, when he had moved to take to Massachusetts he said he should not go through New Hampshire but would go by boat. Evidently he feared robbery. This remark was made in the settlement of the Littleton Light & Power Company's affairs wherein Maine Savings Bank were interested bond holders.

That was one of Dan Remick's bold-faced holdups which apparently received the full sanction of the first families of that thriving North County metropolis.

New Hampshire is my native state and its soil covers the ashes of my ancestors and it is with regret that I pen these lines, but the truth must be told. Maine has something similar in its bogus land tax rules to the unsophisticated New Yorker who has been trying for years to recover his money. Somehow I feel this has been paid.

If not, it should be as a State, no more than an individual can afford to gain by dishonesty. That is simply what it was, nothing more or less.

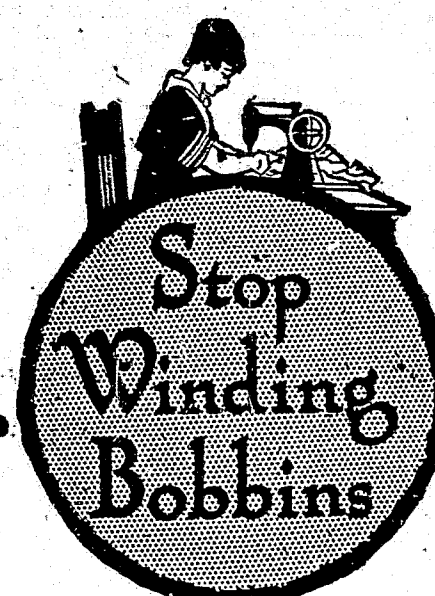

Patriotic families display flags. I have put out two but they are so small and hidden by the trees I am afraid they cannot be seen by the passing autoists. This must be remedied.

The girls and some of the young folks play croquet and it is surprising to see how much gabble there is in a game.

The boys come round and respectfully inquire of my ground and then slip into the hammock with the girls and it's giggle, giggle, giggle for hours.

Mosquitos sing, bees buzz, the dog barks and the tramp keeps on the other side of the street while I wait the slow progress of gaining health and strength.

Will Lengthen Season.
It appears very likely that the season will be considerably extended in the Maine summer resorts this year, a fact that is satisfactory although the reason for the lengthening of the vacation period is to be regretted, this being the infantile paralysis epidemic in New York and elsewhere. Usually the Maine resorts begin to lose their patrons early in September and by the middle of the month most of the visitors have left because of the usual necessity of starting their children in the schools. New York city has already determined to postpone the opening of the city schools until Oct. 1, and the Massachusetts school authorities are considering taking a similar action although the victims of the disease have not as yet reached large numbers in the Bay State.

And irrespective of the opening of the schools the city sojourners along our coasts and by our inland waters would hesitate under present conditions from taking their families back to the infected cities. In our state there have been reported but a few isolated cases of the disease in comparison with that in the large centers of population.

The summer residents who remain in this state for September will find new attractions for Maine is at its best in September.

We will send you this paper four months on trial for 50 cents and you can pay any time during the time. Write us or telephone 119-11.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

HANOVER
Bear Mountain Grange.
Bear Mountain Grange, No. 62, met in regular session Saturday evening, August 19th.

The regular business of the meeting was followed by taking up a postponed topic for discussion: Resolved that for a term of years, it is better, owing to the high price of labor and fertilizers, to raise less hood crops for market and raise more crops that require less labor, to feed our cows.

Opened in the affirmative by Wilson
Morse, in the negative by L. E. McIntire.

Mr. Morse made the points: that hired help of any kind is hard to find; that fodder corn, millet and other forage crops require less labor, also less fertilizer; that frosts and wet weather effect hood crops badly; that the crops requiring less labor can be made a sure profit when fed to dairy cows and the milk machine makes larger herds for the average farmer possible without making more labor necessary.

Mr. McIntire stated that hood crops helped out the labor question in that they made steady occupation for the help.
He has found that with plenty of fertilizer from the barns, not a large quantity need be purchased. Hood crops are necessary to secure a constant income to purchase the concentrated feeds which we cannot raise ourselves at a profit. Barley is better on the whole than oats for him.
Hood crops, like corn, potatoes, etc.,
bring in more money.

The appointed speakers were followed by several of the members. The general opinion was that while the weather and other circumstances made it advisable to put less acreage in hood crops for a few years, on the whole the farmers could not afford to do so long, but must have the hood crops to make a profit.

The worthy lecturer then proposed a consideration of the so-called "54 hour law." After some talk by him on this subject, he called on Raymond Saunders to start the talk. He was followed by
L. E. McIntire and several others.

This proved an interesting subject as it is soon to come before the voters at the September elections.

PRESERVING OLD MANUSCRIPTS.

There are not 50 persons in the United States who are skilled in the preservation and repairing of old manuscripts. One of them, says the University of Wisconsin Bulletin, may be found working on the third floor of the Wisconsin historical library building at Madison, one of the six or seven institutions in the country that carry on such work scientifically.

About a generation or two ago a priest in the Vatican library at Rome originated and developed the process now in use in the taking care of old papers. Until last year there was none of this work which was high grade and scientific done in this country west of the Alleghenies. All work that the university had done was sent to Massachusetts. Last July the process was introduced to the State historical library.

The first thing done in the process of preserving the letters is for each copy of between wet newspapers under a weight and leave them for five or six hours. This removes the creases and the dirt. Then they are put between woodpulp boards and left twenty-four hours and then between blotters to complete the drying process. The next step is to repair the paper. The paper of some of these letters is so old when received that it falls to pieces if struck. This is strengthened by a layer of creoline, a transparent cloth, on both sides of the piece of paper. Other letters need mending along the edges with parchment paper. To cover holes a piece of paper is glued over the edges and is left larger than the hole until dry. It is then cut down to the proper size and the edges are sandpapered until smooth. After all such repairs are made the letters are mounted on large white sheets and prepared for binding.

Humus in the Soil Makes it Breathe and Take on Life.

Making hay while the sun shines is no more practical or necessary than growing humus in a wet season. Though a soil contain all the elements of plant food, if it lacks humus it is unprepared properly to develop useful plants.

Humus is decayed vegetation. An example of it that every farmer has seen is the black fluffy, fibrous corpse of an old strawstack. When tall grass, clover, weeds and the like are plowed under they decompose; the result is organic matter or humus. This material which may be likened to the roughage in a ration for live stock, serves a similar purpose, in that it prevents the hardening and packing of soil granules. Its presence in the soil facilitates the entrance and circulation of air. It enables the soil to inhale and exhale to "breathe."

Various species of microscopic animals called germs or bacteria live in the soil, and in some way, not yet fully understood, initiate or foster chemical changes and combinations of the plant food elements which are essential to the growth of plants. These infinitesimal organisms do not thrive in hard, cold soils; they require air, moisture and heat for their multiplication and work.

Soils stocked with humus fairly teem with bacteria during the growing season. A speck of such earth, the size of a pinhead observed under the microscope would exhibit a maze of active life-forms. A soil that contains these lovely life forms is literally "alive," in that they are absent the soil is "dead," inert and diseased. With the intricate web of life in the soil, the amount of energy which an astonishing amount of energy is employed, soil bacteria have much more to do than is commonly assumed.

THE FIRST JOB.

A host of young fellows just out of school and college are this month for the first time drawing a regular pay envelope. No wages earned in later life, even if much larger, ever looks quite as good to adults with proper food, health, and clothing are at a maximum of comfort when the temperature is anywhere between 61 and 77.

The agile fingers of a boy often command a range of pay quite out of proportion to what he should earn later on. A fifteen-year-old youngster feels mighty proud of earning $1.50 a day folding circulars. He swaggers around the town showing his roll and treating the girls. But let him reflect that if he were to fold circulars all his life he would never get much more than that.

Most young men are anxious for big pay quick. They can not afford to wait. They want their automobiles now and they do not want any old fashioned four-cylinder machines either. They are looking for short cuts to success, and are impatient with the hard path of steady and sure progress.

The thing for them to consider is not how much money they are getting for a start, but whether they are in some place that is educating them for better things later on.

In many employments requiring the finer discriminations, the new man is practically useless for a year or two. He may be paid a little something to encourage him, but he makes more mistakes than his wages are worth. But all the time he is learning things that may be of great value to him. He should reflect that a business training must be paid for as well as a scholastic one. A position in which good pay can be earned at the start is not apt to lead to anything much higher. The rate of the salary is a sign that the work is too easy to learn, and that it leads to no further advancement.

WELL TO REMEMBER.

Remember, above all things, to keep the battery well supplied with water, for they can't and won't work without it. If your radiator runs dry, you hear from your engine at once, and unmistakably. But if your battery lacks water, it will still (for a while) stay the job and suffer in silence. The plates and separators dry out and trying to do their work under this handicap, heat and crumble.

We might paraphrase the hair tonic ads:

Solution an inch below the plate tops and battery still working—water will save it.

Solution two inches below the plate tops and battery still working—water may save it.

Solution three inches below the plate tops and battery still working feebly—too late for water to save it.

Don't expect the battery to deliver more current to the lamps and starting motor, the electric horn and ignition system than you put into it by the engine it can't do it.

Most car owners seem to think that the storage battery is a modern edition of the widow's curse. Night after night the car will be left standing for hours with all lamps burning and without the engine making a single revolution.

To the battery this kind of operation is a case of "everything going out and nothing coming in." An enforced "hunger strike that no constitution can long withstand.

Keep the battery clean and also firmly fixed in place by means of the hold-downs. Don't use a 12-inch monkey-wrench, but use a 12-inch monkey-wrench, or a hammer and cold chisel, to set up the connections. These are prolific causes of cracked and leaky jars.

You would not continue to drive on a flat tire or with a punctured and empty radiator, or with a leaky or empty oiling system. If you did you would expect to pay for it in a good-sized repair bill.

Therefore, take the trouble to notice when putting water into the cells (and this should be done regularly) if any cell seems to need much more water than the others. If it does, it suggests a leaky battery jar, if attended to at once, can be replaced at small expense. If neglected, damage to the battery will quickly and surely result that will necessitate extensive and, therefore, costly repairs.

The hydrometer syringe is to the storage battery what the fuel gauge or measuring stick is to the gasoline tank. Every user should have one, and use it regularly. A hydrometer reading of the solution in each cell can be taken in a moment just before putting water into the cells and the information so obtained is a valuable check on the condition of the battery, but also upon the operating condition of the entire electrical system.

BABY'S CLOTHES.

A mother living in South Carolina writes us that one physician advises her to keep a knit belly band on her baby all summer. Another one tells her to let the baby go nearly naked in hot weather. She wants to know which is right. We tell her the second—that in a hot climate where the temperature is warm all of the time and hot some of the time, the baby should wear no clothes except a diaper and a cap.

This bald statement is based upon the following considerations: Body heat is manufactured by food and work. Rubber increased the heat production of a dog 44 per cent. by excessive feeding. Any amount of food which is proper in cold weather becomes excessive and produces too much heat in hot weather. Howland showed that a crying, kicking baby made considerably more heat than one asleep.

So much for the manufacture of heat. Babies will kick and squirm. They must be kept in a cool, agreeable temperature. They must make an excessive amount of heat. How do they get rid of it? By radiation conduction and evaporation.

Clothing lessens radiation, conduction and evaporation. The more of the clothing the more it is stopped. McClure and Sauer claim that the heat of a baby put them in incubators. They found it rather an easy matter to kill a puppy by overclothing him when the air was hot. Other puppies clothed and kept in a warm place got diarrhea, even though they were fed good food.

In very hot weather getting rid of heat is a difficult matter. Rubber tells us that adults with proper food, health, and clothing are at a maximum of comfort when the temperature is anywhere between 61 and 77.

USES OF DENATURED ALCOHOL.

The New York World recently had a cartoon showing a blacksmith gloating over the news of forty-cent gasoline, and saying, "Now, I guess some folks will have to get a loss."

The Philadelphia North American of March 12, 1916, contains this headline: "Forty Cent Gasoline is Predicted for June; No Chance of a Drop."

The motor industry of the United States faces a problem. The solution may be found in a Congressional act of June 7, 1906 (amended March 2, 1907), providing for the manufacture of denatured alcohol free from tax, excessive supervision and crippling restrictions.

Alcohol is denatured by the addition of materials which give it "a thorough foreign and nauseating odor and taste," without interfering with the particular industrial purpose for which it is intended to be used. Completely denatured alcohol calls for the use of wood alcohol calls for the use of wood alcohol, benzoin or pyridin.

So treated it cannot be used internally

SKUNK KNOWS NO FEAR.

Little Animal is Well Able to Protect Itself.

The skunk is not only one of the handsomest of American "varmints," he is also the boldest. He is the beau sabreur, the Cyrano, the insouciant, devil-may-care adventurer. Confident in his powers of offense and defense, he goes carelessly about his way, asking only to be left alone. He is not looking for trouble, neither is he avoiding it.

Encounter him about sundown on a country road and he will let you alone, if you do not crowd him. Perhaps he will hop along in your pathway, keeping just far enough ahead for your common convenience. If you are acquainted with his little peculiarities you will permit him to settle the pace. If you are not acquainted with them—if, perchance, you think he is a pretty, black-and-white, kittenish little thing, and if, so thinking, you rush up and try to make a capture, disillusionment will soon be your portion. For when you are at just the right distance he will give his white-tipped tail a quick flick in your general direction.

You will then pause. You will suddenly have lost all inclination to advance. Probably you will be nauseated, possibly half-choked and half-blinded. All the Arabic perfumes necessary to purify Lady Macbeth's little hand wouldn't purify your apparel in a year. You are likely to feel a longing to hide from your fellow men for some time to come. Your fellow man is likely to reproach you for the feeling with usury. You have committed a gross indiscretion, a great strategic blunder, and you will have to pay the price. But you have added to your stock of knowledge. Never again will you try to kick any little polecat around.

The oil he employs with such effectiveness is a yellow, clear liquid, slightly phosphorescent, so as to be faintly visible at night. It is acid and is virtually acrid when it falls upon any tender living tissue. It is extremely volatile, and a tiny drop is sufficient to fill all the surrounding atmosphere with the offensive odor. When inhaled in large quantities it is suffocating, sometimes producing unconsciousness and even death.

The liquid is distilled within the body and is carried through long tubes to two small capsules imbedded in the thick muscles at the root of the tail. The animal can discharge either or both capsules at will, and his aim is astonishingly accurate. One would never think it, but he is very miserly with this fluid. He will not waste it, and will even try all kinds of bluffs to avoid using it. With animals anywhere near his own size the skunk prefers to fight with tooth and claw. The conclusion, when one is in the neighborhood of a skunk's recent operations, that he has fired all the oil in the universe, is premature. It smells that way, however, and this is a pardonable error.

SUICIDE OF BEES.

More Frames Needed.

"There is a matter that should be called to the immediate attention of bee keepers," says Frederic P. Graves of Waterville, "and that is the condition of the bees in Maine, or at least in this section of the state. Because of the large number of white clover blossoms the bees have been storing up a large amount of honey and bees, because of their prosperity are committing suicide."

Mr. Graves goes on to explain his rather surprising statement. "Bees never work two years alike. This year they have filled up the boxes and have begun to store their honey in the brood boxes and even the tops of the hives full of honey. They have followed this method for several weeks."

"If we continue to have basswood flowers, buckwheat, alsach, and a second crop of white clover, more and more honey will be stored and there will be no place for the queen to deposit her eggs and the bees will die because they have not been reproducing themselves."

"I have examined very many hives the past week, and I have found that the bees and even the tops of the hives full of honey."

"Bee keepers should examine their hives and should put empty frames in the brood department for the queens to use."

"It is a serious condition of affairs. I remember that we had the same serious condition 32 years ago in this state. In that year, at a convention of bee keepers, J. B. Mason of Mechanic Falls, to whom there is no better expert in Maine, said that bees would not go over two inches of sealed or capped honey to deposit the surplus in the boxes. While that is not true every year, yet when bee find conditions similar to those described they should give the bees empty frames or the bees will die before the next spring."

There are certain points to remember in using this bait:

1. The fruit juice must be added just before the bait is applied. Otherwise it will not be effective. Other ingredients may be mixed the night before, but not the fruit.

2. There is no use whatever in applying any bait after the sun has risen. Sunshine will quickly dry up the bait, and dissipate the odor so that the hoppers will not be attracted to it.

3. The bait must be sown broadcast, and thinly, not thrown down in clumps.

4. In treating an infested area the whole section must be gone over. Otherwise the hoppers from an untreated portion will move over into a portion that has been cleared, and there will be no apparent benefit. If an entire area cannot be done in one morning, work should begin at one end of the section and proceed as rapidly as possible to the other end.

5. The dead grasshoppers killed by the bait will not usually be found in the open. They have a tendency to hide away under leaves or in clumps of grass. Also, they will not be found until the second day after the bait is applied. Usually from 24 to 48 hours are required before the poison kills the hoppers.

6. If the bait is scattered thinly, in the proportions given above, there should be no danger to livestock, either cattle or fowl.

7. Do not apply the bait just before or during a rain, as the rain will wash off the particles of poison from the grass before the hoppers find it.

8. In treating large areas a convenient way to apply the bait is from the rear end of a wagon. With one man to drive, another can scatter the bait broadcast toward the rear, or two men can scatter bait, one toward either side. If a team is driven back and forth across a field, the bait will thus be spread in strips, with a rod or so between each strip.

There is never any one satisfied, when it is not they are complaining it is too hot, and when it is cold they find fault because it is so cold.

It has been the hottest for the last three days that it has been this summer.

CONTROL OF GRASSHOPPERS.

Grasshoppers are again abundant this year in certain sections.

Experience has definitely proved that an epidemic of grasshoppers can be checked practically all damage avoided by the prompt use of a good grasshopper bait as recommended last year by the State College and the State Department of Agriculture. To accomplish this, however, there must be a willingness on the part of the farmers in an infested area to get together and work in harmony and the remedial measures must be properly attended to. Areas that were very properly treated last year show very few grasshoppers this year.

The foundation of the bait is coarse bran. Twenty pounds of bran makes enough bait for two acres. With this bran is mixed one pound of paris green.

In a separate vessel one quart of cheap molasses is stirred into 3 1/2 gallons of water. Then three lemons or oranges are added to this sweetened water. The juice is squeezed in and the pulp and rind are chopped up fine and put in also.

Finally the poisoned bran is moistened with this mixture of molasses, water, and fruit juice. This makes the poisoned bran moist but not sloppy. For larger areas use proportionate amounts of the above ingredients.

The bait is applied broadcast in the early morning, before the sun is up. It must be scattered evenly and thinly. While the odor of the fruit lasts the grasshoppers will be attracted to the bait and will eat it eagerly.

There are certain points to remember in using this bait:

1. The fruit juice must be added just before the bait is applied. Otherwise it will not be effective. Other ingredients may be mixed the night before, but not the fruit.

2. There is no use whatever in applying any bait after the sun has risen. Sunshine will quickly dry up the bait, and dissipate the odor so that the hoppers will not be attracted to it.

3. The bait must be sown broadcast, and thinly, not thrown down in clumps.

4. In treating an infested area the whole section must be gone over. Otherwise the hoppers from an untreated portion will move over into a portion that has been cleared, and there will be no apparent benefit. If an entire area cannot be done in one morning, work should begin at one end of the section and proceed as rapidly as possible to the other end.

5. The dead grasshoppers killed by the bait will not usually be found in the open. They have a tendency to hide away under leaves or in clumps of grass. Also, they will not be found until the second day after the bait is applied. Usually from 24 to 48 hours are required before the poison kills the hoppers.

6. If the bait is scattered thinly, in the proportions given above, there should be no danger to livestock, either cattle or fowl.

7. Do not apply the bait just before or during a rain, as the rain will wash off the particles of poison from the grass before the hoppers find it.

8. In treating large areas a convenient way to apply the bait is from the rear end of a wagon. With one man to drive, another can scatter the bait broadcast toward the rear, or two men can scatter bait, one toward either side. If a team is driven back and forth across a field, the bait will thus be spread in strips, with a rod or so between each strip.

SELECTING YEARLING HENS TO HOLD OVER FOR BREEDERS

For years it has been a common practice of poultry-men to keep over a pen or two of yearling birds to use as breeders. These hens ordinarily loaf from the time they moult, whenever it may be, until the following spring. In consequence of this rest, they come into laying with a good sized egg having a strong vigorous germ which enjoys a better reputation for hatching than do eggs of the pullets which have become somewhat exhausted by heavy winter production.

However, it would be realized that the loaf these birds take, during the very time when commercial eggs bring the highest price, is an expensive one. For this reason, many poultry-men prefer to occupy their housing room only with pullets, and if they must have yearling hens, they may expect a good winter production. The following spring they breed from the strongest and most vigorous of these. This practice is undoubtedly the most profitable one for people who keep flocks of one hundred birds or less.

Large poultry plants and ones which make a practice of selling high priced hatching eggs are justified in the expense and additional bother of holding over yearling hens.

The method of choosing the highest producing birds when transients are used was outlined in the February letter of this series. At this time of the year, all pullets which began to lay early last fall and have kept at it consistently since then are quite exhausted of any vigor and are therefore to be discarded. This is a much more reliable test of production than is the time of moult which depends more on other physiological factors. However, a large percent of the highest producers do not moult until fall and are likely to continue laying until pretty well rid of feathers.

THINNING OUT NON-PRODUCERS

In conjunction with the selection of the few to save as breeders comes the rejection of many in order to make room for the maturing pullets. Those which have not the tendency to lay and all birds showing constitutional weakness should be marketed early in order to save feed and take advantage of the high prices on fowl.

An examination of the flock will reveal many "boarders" whose lay-bones are close together and rigid. These birds should be culled out from time to time, at intervals of two weeks or so, and sent to market.

Some of them will have stopped laying in good flesh but others may be improved upon. The expensive part of the animal, the frame, is already built and the profitable part, the finish, should be supplied. This is done with a few days of skilful feeding. They had best be kept in coops or small pens and starved a day to stimulate hunger for their new ration. A good fattening feed for hens consists of a mixture of equal parts middlings, or feed, clover, and cornmeal, mixed with milk (or water) and fed twice a day. What will be cleaned up in twenty minutes. Care must be taken not to feed before birds that are fattening, otherwise they will go "off feed" and fail to make gains.

It is not advisable to supply hard grain nor to continue the feeding for too long a period; ten days or two weeks is usually sufficient time to finish off mature fowl. The secret of fattening is to get the birds hungry in the beginning and then to keep them greedy for each meal.

"FOR THYSELF, THY CHILDREN AND THY COUNTRY"

Do you realize of the millions of babies born every year, only a few of them ever grow up physically fit to do their best in living for, and fighting for their country? Did you know that there are a great percentage of young men that cannot enlist because of their physical condition?

Did I hear someone say that it could not be helped? It can, again I say it can be done. How many parents give their children work to do, send them to school, give them something to eat and wear, and let them grow? Yes, but grow how? Round shouldered, weak limbed or any other way they happen to. I say that it can be helped; straighten the child's shoulders and body, and if any parts appear weak, give him exercises that will strengthen them. He may object at first but when he finds a pride in his body building, you will find that he has the strongest of allies in keeping free from cigarettes and alcoholic drinks that destroy both the physical and the mental bodies.

The worldly people are now calling from everywhere for more education, and education is brain development and also a broader knowledge of the world and its conditions of life, yet why should they not call for more physical development to balance the education? Education makes one happy by knowing, and healthy strength gives one a feeling of cleanness and of courage; the two together make a combination that is hard to conquer, whether it's in one man or in an army of such men.

Years ago when our grandfathers and great grandfathers fought for their own, ours and the country's liberty, the men knew what a gun was, and how it was handled, and they were also hardened to tramping, all day and camping nights without being entirely fatigued. To-day only a few young men know the difference between a Mauser and a Winchester rifle, and one-half day of steady walking is considered a good way of committing suicide. Is the trouble with Daddy's automobile, or is it Mother's fear of rides, swimming holes, and other athletic helps and exercises, or is it something else that is making many of the young men of to-day into "Favor Sitters," "Take Life Easies," or "Cotters"? When the call comes, and wakes their patriotism, they enlist (if they can) only to be taught which way to point a gun while shooting, and get slowly hardened to walking and camping, and even then, they find themselves unequal to the few men that have long since become acquainted with guns and camp life.

Please do not mistake me, these young men are to be honored for their patriotism and courage, even more than the young man who does not have so hard a time acquiring military training, but the fact remains, that these boys are not so much help to our government in the time of need, as the boys who are already hardened to the fundamentals of military life.

We might throw aside all personal feeling and take a lesson from Germany. For about two years she has held her own against great odds. Why? Because practically every young man of fighting age was in condition for war or peace, for they were evenly balanced physically and mentally, and she has less criminals and more healthy children at birth, than perhaps any other country in the world comparing with its size and population. To be sure her young men were made fit by compulsory training, but would we need compulsory training with our great amount of land, forests, shooting galleries, athletic fields and gyms, to say nothing of the clean, upright, man-making organization of Boy Scouts, and in the summer camps work for physical training as well as for educational studies, and you can take advantage of one or more if you would. If parents started every child on the road to health, hardihood and well muscled physiques, as well as with a good education, it would result in happier, better men and women, and the next generation will be even happier and stronger and this same will place the country in such a position that it will never lack real men to fight for liberty and the flag.

On the other hand, if parents say, "I am not bringing my boy up to be a soldier," and they give him no physical training for his own sake as well as his country's, then I do not see wherein the government has a choice, but to take all the boys for compulsory training so as to have men in physical condition to fight for love and liberty, beneath the folds of Old Glory.

The government would hardly need the expense of a large standing army if even two-thirds of our young men were in physical condition, in case of emergency, to enlist, learn the army drills, and march to the front.

By making itself better physically as well as mentally, you will give your children an inheritance of a stronger, healthier life, and they in turn will pass on from generation to generation, ever lifting the country's symbol of love, life and liberty higher and higher into the air until it is beyond the reach of all countries that do not see in time what is needed to-day, tomorrow and forever.

Even Germany, who practiced what was needed first, will be so far set back with her big war, that she will only be able to watch the American Eagle wheel aloft on its giant pinions of power that will grow stronger every year. Did I say Germany practiced the physical reform first? It was really practiced in the ancient history times by the Spartans, Athenians and Persians. Germany though is now the only one that has practical life with the living proof that it will come in time to all countries, and to us it must come soon in the home or in common schools, if it does not come, the government will bring it by taking the extra expense of training compulsorily all the young men, so as to be sure to have that which is needed to place the flag, that our grandfathers and great grandfathers fought, bled and died for, on a higher and firmer pedestal.

I know that thy loyalty and my loyalty are one, and that as long as rich, red American blood flows through the body of a true American, the flag of strength, truth, and love will never be dragged in the dust. So let our daily thoughts be to make ourselves stronger, physically and mentally, for our own sake, for our children's health, and for the country's life and strength. With this we can keep free from the compulsory training that fathers and mothers do not want and even the government does not want to enforce on the people.

If a drawback appears, remember our motto "In God We Trust" and continue thy fight, for no living creature of person can long resist determination to do, and be right. Albert P. Plunge.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

A Barefoot Boy and the Bees.

A barefoot boy is a wonderful thing, but a barefoot boy catching and handling a swarm of wild bees without fear is a still more wonderful thing. Passers by on the street Monday morning stopped to watch just such a sight as 11 year old Charles Wing was digging out a bumble bee's nest from under the bay window of Elgin Greenleaf's house. He had secured the comb from the nest and had placed it in a small hive of his own construction. He said he was going to swarm them. He acted like a veteran bee man picking up the bees in his hands while others were flying all about him. The wonder of the thing was that he had not received a single sting and apparently had no fear of the bees whatsoever. He said he had handled bees before and knew just how to do it, saying that you mustn't touch one while he is lying on his back and if you get one angry wait until you count ten before touching him, when his anger will be all gone and you then can handle him with safety. He pointed out the queen bee as if he knew what he was saying and by working carefully around the bees they seemed to understand that he did not intend them any harm. Surely he is a veteran bee man at the youthful age of 11 years.

NEWS FROM THE BOYS AT LAREDO.

Laredo, Texas, August 17, 1916.

Dear Sir: Last evening a Mexican Carnival was held on "St. Augustine Plaza" for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The band boys attended with Carlos Richter as their guide, and spent a most enjoyable evening.

"St. Augustine Plaza" is one of the three largest plazas in Laredo and is situated on a beautiful spot overlooking the Rio Grande near the International bridge. After paying five cents for admission it was simply a case of walking around and patronizing the different booths where hot tamales, coffee, weinerwursts, ice cream, candy, etc., were being sold. The whole affair was similar to our lawn parties, the only difference being that it was very much larger.

The band from the Ninth furnished music during the evening. We were very pleased a few days ago to learn that the chaplain had just received over two hundred books from the State Library for the 2nd Maine Regiment. Most every man in camp, when off duty, can be found in his tent with his head buried in one of these books now.

Francis O'Brien, bugler in Co. D, was held here at Headquarters as clerk, when the company left for San Ygnacio. Since that time he has been promoted to the position of "sergeant."

For the past week we have been working on our new $180.00 mess-hack and now have it nearly completed. This for the headquarters company only, the other companies will build their mess-shacks as they return from their stations on the border. Taking this into consideration and the fact that car loads of mules are arriving each day for the different regiments here, it looks as though the boys would be on the border for some time yet.

Last week the people of Bangor sent a large box of "comfort bags" to the members of Co. G, the Machine Gun Co., and the 2nd Regiment Band. The boys were very pleased to receive them and appreciate the kindness of the Bangor people very much. The bags contained talcum powder, soap, wash cloths, handkerchiefs, thread, buttons, tooth paste, writing paper, envelopes, pencils, smoking tobacco, cigarettes, and chewing gum. Yesterday the band boys received from the people of Newport, Maine, a large box containing "ditty bags," pill boxes, slippers, food, candy, etc. To-day Sergeant Daugherty, O'Brien and I received from Capt. Nash the "housewives" that he sent us, also a dollar apiece from Capt. Siles, who made a trip to headquarters this morning. We all appreciate very much the kindness of the people of Norway and South Paris, and especially the fact that they were remembered, although we are not connected directly with Co. D. The money looked good to us, for we haven't received a cent of government pay, since we were called out.

An order was received here at headquarters a few days ago from Washington, D. C. to send the 2nd Maine Regiment Band home, September 1, 1916, in order that the boys may return to college and continue their work at the University of Maine. The order of Col. Cummings, to the Registrar of our university for affidavits, and if everything turns out right, we will be back in Maine by the tenth of next month.

I almost forgot to say that while talking with Capt. Siles this morning, I told him how Co. D was getting along at San Ygnacio, and he said, "Fine!" He also stated that there had been no sickness among the boys, and that he expected they would be back here in Laredo in a week or two.

Hoping to see you by the tenth of September, I remain

Laredo, Texas, August 19, 1916

Dear Sir: The worst storm in four years swept Corpus Christi, Brownsville, Laredo and the surrounding towns last night, blowing the first two mentioned. The tents in the different camps here were all blown down, and the boys passed a most disagreeable night in a foot and a half of water. We're glad that these storms come but once in four years.

Ed. Pooler of Co. H was drowned in the Rio Grande last Wednesday at Dolores, making the second man from our Maine regiment to meet death in this way. His body has not been recovered yet.

Very truly yours,
Harry S. Lasselle.

On their way from Maine to Springfield, they passed through Boston over that beautiful section known as Commonwealth avenue. Passing through Framingham to Hartford, Conn. Returning to Greenwood, they had a very hot trip. Then through Atford, Newburyport to Kittery, the latter being the home of Mrs. Abbott's brother, Carl Brown, formerly of Norway. While in Kittery they visited in Dover and New Castle, returning to Portland Saturday, August 19th.

PLEASED BUT SURPRISED.
Friday evening about milking time, Horace Sawyer drove into Charles Boober's yard with his painting tackle, but no paint and began to fix up his sign on the gable end of the barn, remembering to Mr. Boober that he guessed it was rather late to start in to paint a barn. Mr. Boober was dumfounded as he had not engaged anyone to paint his barn and didn't know that it needed painting as it is in pretty good shape.

However, Mr. Boober going into the house told his wife that Hod must be out of his head or else overcome by the heat as evidently Hod had a barn to paint somewhere and had got the wrong paint. When Mr. Boober had filled a couple of pails of milk from the cow he came out to see if there was any change in the mad demonstrations of the painter.

He found him in the road surveying the barn with a critical eye and going out to him saw what had caused the apparently insane delusion. Hod had carelessly repainted the letters about an inch thick which he had painted red and varnished and when arranged on the barn, spelled Hillside Milk Farm. Mr. Boober was completely surprised, but he thought they looked pretty good there and as Hod didn't propose to charge anything for his job, Mr. Boober let them stay.

Hod said he supposed Mr. Boober knew all about it as several knew that he was making the letters and that some of the inquisitive girls had tried to arrange them to spell things, but could make nothing of it. Altogether Mr. Boober is pretty pleased.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untrue letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Pipe Makers buy Mountain Laurel Roots from Government.

A sale of a large quantity of mountain laurel roots from one of the National Forests in the Southern Appalachians is reported by officials in charge, who say that the roots will be used to make pipes.

The mountain laurel root is similar in appearance to the French briar, which the majority of pipe smokers are said to prefer. The French briar is the root of the white heath or "bruyere." These roots are gathered in large quantities and after being cleaned and sawed into blanks they are placed in hot water and simmered for twelve hours or more.

This process gives them the rich hue for which the best pipes are noted. It is said that in 1915 the value of the blanks shipped to this country was almost $300,000, and in addition a large number of finished pipes were imported.

On account of the present scarcity and high price of French briar, a number of pipe manufacturers in this country have the look for substitutes, and the Forest Products Laboratory has conducted experiments to determine the availability of other woods. It is reported that the mountain laurel burns out more readily than briar, but Forest Service experts are trying to find a method of hardening the wood, and have succeeded to an appreciable extent. They have also found that a number of the various kinds of chaparral which are abundant in the West give promise of yielding material which will be the equal of French briar in every way.

Considerable amounts of the laurel roots are being used, and officials expect to make further sales. The lands purchased by the Government in the Southern Appalachians are reported to contain unlimited quantities of laurel, which is widely known for the delicate beauty of its flowers. In places it forms extensive thickets, which are almost impenetrable. Visitors to the mountains say that in the spring these thickets, "pink beds" as they are called by the mountaineers, are indescribably beautiful and form one of the main attractions of the region.

The sales of laurel root will not be made at places frequented by tourists, or where the removal of the laurel will detract from the beauty of the landscape.

Clean Hands.

Disease germs lead a hand to mouth existence. If the human hand is not clean, it is a source of infection. Does Advertising Pay?
It is an old query, and one that has been discussed for many years, and yet there are many persons today who will deny the efficiency of printer's ink.

Having been a party to a discussion on the subject the other day wherein it was said that "It costs money to advertise, therefore some people think that advertisers have to charge more for their goods to pay for advertising," we are prompted to again refute that time worn assertion.

Advertisers do not have to charge more for their goods. On the other hand they can sell goods at a less price than the man who does not advertise because he can sell thousands of goods instead of in hundred lots.

There has probably never been any greater fallacy than the idea that the cost of goods is increased by advertising, provided always, of course, the advertising is intelligently done. In cases where advertising is not coupled with intelligence a failure usually results and the goods soon disappear from the market; so cases of this kind are unimportant.

An example of the power of publicity was vividly exemplified here in town last week when one of the department stores was compelled to close its doors on account of the throng of shoppers who responded to their announcement of bargains.

Possibly the best evidence that advertising does not increase the cost of goods is furnished by the Ford automobile. Not only has advertising not increased the cost of the car, but it is well known, it has been responsible for reduction in price until it now sold at a price which only a few years ago it would have seemed absolutely foolish to predict. Although less obvious perhaps, intelligent advertising has been responsible for the reduction in price of many other commodities, or what amounts to the same thing—an improvement in the quality of the goods or a betterment in service at the same price.

Intelligent advertising pays. This proposition cannot be successfully controverted. It pays the manufacturer, the jobber, the dealer, and insures the consumer getting more for his money than he possibly could otherwise.—Sanford News.
